Xray and I just had a lot of fun with it. I am an amnesiac, and this album is my day-in-the-life! I've been recording and recording, and every time I think "I am done, I'm good with this song," I go back and add to it. It sounds like everything is taken off the ground and left bare. I've recorded this a million times. It's just me in a room, playing guitar, and I can't hear my instrument. You get a direct, raw feeling. The bass is empty. It's just a boring, lonely feeling. Then you get the distorted guitar and the drums, and it's all hells! I'm not trying to make it that way. It's what came out. It's not the way I want to play. My music has to be fun. I like the Lyrics from 8pm. You get a lot of that in. That's an upbeat, fun song, and it's not a normal outro. It comes off as more of a cut, rather than an outro. That's what makes it interesting to me. "8pm" has an interesting balance of the two. In that song, I was really excited to play it. I love the bass in it. When I play 8pm live, it's very different than what you hear in the recording. I played a lot of 4/4 drum parts live, so that's why you hear the drums for that song. NON: I think it's all over the place, but in a good way. It's not "do this, do this, do this." It's a totally different way of thinking. What do you consider "VINYL" vs. "CDR" vs. "FLAC" vs. "OGA"? NON: In terms of audio quality, vinyl is the best. OGAs have a warm sound, but some of them have problems. I would say just by listening to each format, the vinyl sounds the best. What are your future plans? NON: I want to make another new album. I have a few songs written that I'm working on. I have a studio that I just set up. I'm pretty happy with where things are. There's no pressure on myself. I'm not trying to rush it, I'm trying to make the best. I feel like the next album will be very consistent. I've been working on one, and it's been really good
